Research has shown me that there are relatively few K3A engine applications out there but there seems to be quite a few with the K3B.

According to my literature the engine is a K3A. I have a K3D in the HDT1000, and I can attest to the fact that they are VERY smooth running. I'm guessing that it has the same block and some other parts as the K3D which is rated at 22 or 23 HP, depending on whose source you use.
